XM Satellite Radio provides listeners with a variety of options to improve what is heard, whether in the car or at home. It is a service that is paid for by individuals, and would impose on the rights of these individuals if our choices were limited. XM radio provides listeners with the opportunity to avoid the mindless chatter that is on the radio as well as repetative commercials. Since having the satellite radio in my new car, I have yet to listen to regular, annoying broadcasting and poor choice of music. The first ammendment rule applies here as well. Aren't there more important issues to be addressed in our nation than spending time on this trivial issue? The likes of national broadcasters and those supporting this ban are only concerned about their pocketbooks, not the demands of Americans.
